edition contains fifteen assignments, with all new problems. For each assignment, there are two variations using the print materials, along with one exercise using Westlaw and one exercise using LexisNexis, which is the format adopted in the 10th edition. The new edition's questions/answers follow the 19th edition of The Bluebook: A Uniform System of Citation (2010). This format provides instructors more flexibility in what exercises they assign and when they assign them. The assignments cover basic legal research, including reporters, digests, citators, statutes, and advanced materials including federal legislative history and federal administrative law. There are also review problems, appropriate for basic and advanced legal research classes. Excerpt from On an Uniform System of Weights, Measures, and Coins for All Nations

Calculations connected with money, weights, and measures make up a great part of the active business of life; and by far the most extensive application of the science of numbers is that made in our daily transactions of buying and selling. Few who are engaged in such calculations will be prepared to state that, considered as arithmetical exercises, they are accompanied with any peculiar intellectual pleasure. The astronomer, who labours over an apparently inextricable mass of numbers, usually feels some interest in a task which even in its progress unfolds relations of symmetry in the arrangements of the material universe; yet he would gladly welcome new processes of computation, which, without impairing the accuracy of his results, would diminish the labour necessary for their evolution. It is, therefore, extremely natural that persons engaged in the ordinary calculations of every-day business should, in like manner, be willing to adopt methods for lessening the time and labour devoted to their computations. In order to arrive at sound conclusions on this question, it is first indispensable to consider the means employed in all kinds of calculations. Mankind have been so long and so universally accustomed to count by tens, that the decimal system of numeration has become associated in our minds with the ground-work of all numerical computations. But this might have been otherwise, and if man had been created with by four or six fingers on each hand, instead of five, we should most probably now employ either eight or twelve as the modulus of our numerical system. Much might be said as to the advantages attending the employment of either of these numbers as a numerical modulus, but such remarks would be wholly speculative at the present day, and would probably never possess the slightest practical utility.

"This edition of The Bluebook retains the same basic approach to legal citation established by its predecessors. The layout of the Bluebook has been updated to make the information easier to access. Some citation forms have been expanded, elaborated upon, or modified from previous editions to reflect the ever-expanding range of authorities used in legal writing and to respond to suggestions from the legal community."--Preface. The Uniform System of Accounts for the Lodging Industry establishes standardized formats and account classifications to guide individuals in the preparation and presentation of financial statements for lodging operations. The publication is a joint effort of the Hotel Association of New York City and the Financial Management Committee of the American Hotel & Lodging Association (AH&LA), with funding from Hospitality Financial & Technology Professionals (HFTP). Purchasers of both the print and digital versions will receive a keycode that provides access to downloadable Excel templates of all financial statements and supporting schedules, as well as a searchable Revenue and Expense Guide. Readers will also be able to receive updates to the book and ask questions on topics related to the book's content. A workbook for practicing the use of The Bluebook: A Uniform System of Citation citation book. A Uniform System of Citation: The Bluebook is the definitive style guide for legal citation in the United States. For generations, law students, lawyers, scholars, judges, and other legal professionals have relied on The Bluebook's uniform system of citation in their writing. In a diverse and rapidly changing legal profession, The Bluebook continues to provide a systematic method by which members of the profession communicate important information to one another about the sources and legal authorities upon which they rely in their work. The Bluebook: A Uniform System of Citation is a style guide that prescribes the most widely used legal citation system in the United States. It is taught and used at a majority of U.S. law schools, and is also used in a majority of federal courts. This public domain book is an open and compatible implementation of the Uniform System of Citation.

Softbound - New, softbound print book. Excerpt from Uniform System of Accounts for Second-Class Cities: The Form of the Budget, the Procedure to Be Followed in Budget Making, and the Classification of Appropriations The General Municipal Law, section 36, authorizes the State Comptroller to formulate and prescribe a system of keeping accounts, which system shall be uniform for cities of the second class in this State. In accordance therewith, such a system has been formulated by this Department and fiscal officers of each such city have been furnished with a uniform system of keeping accurate and proper records of receipts and expenditures by their respective offices. As a part of this uniform system, this Department has prescribed a form for the annual budget to be adopted by such cities and for their use in the preparation of estimates of receipts and expenditures for the year 1913 and in the adoption of their final budgets for the same year by respective common councils. Available in both Bluebook and ALWD versions, the annually revised ICW uses a building-block approach to learning citation. Individual chapters include explanatory text with examples, a checklist summary of the text, and a citation exercise for practicing and reinforcing the rules covered in the chapter. Students can complete a citation exercise either in their ICW Workbook or in the newly updated and enhanced online Workstation, accessible via Lexis Advance. Doing the exercises online provides immediate feedback for both correct and incorrect answers. For incorrect answers, references to the citation rules needed to correct the answer allow students to become familiar with using their citation guide as a reference and further enhance the learning experience. Please contact your LexisNexis Publishing Representative to request copies of our new student and faculty user guides for the online Workstation.
