This book is divided into two parts, the first of which seeks to connect the phase transitions of various disciplines, including game theory, and to explore the synergies between statistical physics and combinatorics. Phase Transitions has been an active multidisciplinary field of research, bringing together physicists, computer scientists and mathematicians. The main research theme explores how atomic agents that act locally and microscopically lead to discontinuous macroscopic changes. Adopting this perspective has proven to be especially useful in studying the evolution of random and usually complex or large combinatorial objects (like networks or logic formulas) with respect to discontinuous changes in global parameters like connectivity, satisfiability etc. There is, of course, an obvious strategic element in the formation of a transition: the atomic agents "selfishly" seek to optimize a local parameter. However, up to now this game-theoretic aspect of abrupt, locally triggered changes had not been extensively studied. In turn, the book's second part is devoted to mathematical and computational methods applied to the pricing of financial contracts and the measurement of financial risks. The tools and techniques used to tackle these problems cover a wide spectrum of fields, like stochastic calculus, numerical analysis, partial differential equations, statistics and econometrics. Quantitative Finance is a highly active field of research and is increasingly attracting the interest of academics and practitioners alike. The material presented addresses a wide variety of new challenges for this audience. Leadership Directories' most popular publication, a detailed directory of Members of Congress, with their leadership roles, committee assignments, subcommittee assignments, Hill and District staff with legislative responsibilities, plus biographical details, phone, and email for all. This issue of BLOOD 'N' THUNDER is highlighted by the first part of an extended survey of FAMOUS FANTASTIC MYSTERIES, a forgotten pulp magazine that reprinted classic early stories of science fiction. Old-Time Radio authority Martin Grams offers a history of the long-forgotten KING KONG radio serial, complete with lengthy script excerpts. Popular-fiction scholar Rick Lai presents another of his Wold Newton-ish excursions into literary lineage, this one concentrating on Robert E. Howard's Bran Mak Morn. David Smith trains a spotlight on Pistol Pete Rice, hero of Street & Smith's Western pulps. Film critic Glenn Kelly pens an appreciation of the screen's first super-villain, the legendary Fantomas. The basic but sad history of nickel-priced pulps is the subject of an article by veteran fictioneer James W. Egan. BNT editor Ed Hulse reports on the 1937 cliffhanger serial RADIO PATROL. Finally, this issue reprints the long-forgotten first adventure of The Hornet, a 1934 character invented by Samuel Merwin. Like every issue of BNT, the Summer 2015 issue is more than a hundred pages long and boasts dozens of illustrations, including reproductions of rare movie stills and original pulp art. This book investigates energy use and measures to improve the energy efficiency of public housing, using post-war social housing development estates in Cyprus as its example. On this Mediterranean island, which experiences hot and humid temperatures throughout the year, residential buildings need to adapt to the climate to improve the thermal comfort of their occupants. The book assesses the domestic energy use of inefficiently built residential tower blocks and their occupants' thermal comfort by considering the significant impact of overheating risks on energy consumption and occupants' thermal comfort and well-being, with the intention of evaluating the current energy performance of base-case representative residential tower blocks (RTBs). In particular, considering the cooling energy demand in the summer, using Famagusta, Cyprus as a case study. It seeks to identify the impact of occupancy patterns and habitual adaptive behaviour of households on home energy performance in order to provide bases for the information needed to calibrate building energy performance of targeted households. In the summer of 2015, Eastern Washington experienced over 2000 fires that burned in excess of 450,000 ha, took the lives of three firefighters, and caused hazardous air quality throughout much of the region. In Eastern Washington, summer 2015 was nearly 1i C warmer than the previous record warm year and 1.4i C warmer than climatology. Dead Fuel Moisture (DFM) in summer 2015 was near the extreme low of record. We examine both Washington's 2015 fire season and the 32-year fire record with respect to temperature and precipitation climatology and other potential drivers of fire. We find that the extreme 2015 fire year was not attributable to any one physical factor, but rather to a combination of anomalously dry and warm summer conditions, a lightning storm in mid-August, and possibly the encroachment of invasive cheatgrass. These risk factors combined to drive large fires that propagated quickly, mostly through grasslands and into forested areas. This book examines Americans and their beliefs about the class divide in the United States. It argues that Americans' beliefs about class and the economic divide develop through a multistep process. Economic affluence influences the development of worldview, measured in terms of ideology, partisanship, and self-identified class consciousness. Class consciousness in turn affects how people look at political and economic issues. This book is intended for scholars and students at every level who study inequality from a political, economic, or sociological position, along with general readers with a growing interest in and awareness of the effects of inequality on our democracy, especially in the wake of the Covid-19 pandemic, the resulting economic contraction, and the protests over racial injustice erupting throughout the world in 2020. Knapper's Quarterly is a publication "for and about the knapper." The publication presents a main cover story, featured articles on relevant topics, profiles of knappers (both living and past), and knap-in reports. Flintknapping is an ancient art that is still practiced around the world today, which involves the chipping of lithic or other materials to produce replicas of arrowheads, knives, and other stone tools. More recently, there is also a growing trend to produce forms known as eccentrics that are considered magnificent works of art, which can stand alone or be used as jewelry. While the publication is geared towards those who practice this as a hobby or work effort, it is also of interest to those who just generally appreciate the art form as well as archaeologists, scholars, outdoorsmen, survivalists, jewelry makers, artists, etc. Some of the topics covered in this Summer 2015, Volume 1, No.1 issue include: the progression of flintknapping into the 21st Century; a look back at flintknapping in southern California during the 1980s; Idaho flintknappers after Crabtree; a thoughtful contemplation about the surprising similarities between surfing and flintknapping; Stone Age fishing on the Mayberry River in Alabama; replicating gray ghost points with the Robert Blue jig; the Cahokia Project; Danish Daggers: the epic battle, and re-knapped broken points. Knapper profiles include Malayna Tanner, Phil Love and the late Are Tsirk as well as knap-in reports from Quartzite, Pedernales, Niblett's Bluff Park, North Columbia River, and Chilao School. A Rochester, New York-based literary journal run by and for teens. With the support of Writers & Books Literary Center, we showcase talented teenage writers from around the world. The National Book Award-winning author compiles a "thought-provoking volume" of essays by Joyce Carol Oates, Oliver Sacks, Jaquira Diaz and others (Publishers Weekly). As Jonathan Franzen writes in his introduction, his main criterion for selecting The Best American Essays 2016 "was whether an author had taken a risk." The resulting volume showcases authorial risk in a variety of forms, from championing an unpopular opinion to the possibility of ruining a professional career, or irrevocably alienating one's family. What's gained are essential insights into aspects of the human condition that would otherwise remain concealed—from questions of queer identity, to the experience of a sibling's autism and relationships between students and college professors. The Best American Essays 2016 includes entries by Alexander Chee, Paul Crenshaw, Jaquira Diaz, Laura Kipnis, Amitava Kaumar, Sebastian Junger, Joyce Carol Oates, Oliver Sacks, George Steiner, Thomas Chatterton Williams, and others.
