successful and influential architects of his generation. During the 1960's and 1970's he reshaped the face and fabric of London with a powerful series of highly visible and uncompromising brutalist buildings, including Centre Point, the Nat West Tower, and King's Reach Tower. Seifert is often described as a modernist version of Christopher Wren in terms of his impact upon the capital, as he built hundreds of towers, office buildings, and hotels in London and other parts of the UK and internationally. An enigmatic and determined figure, Seifert achieved much in his lifetime, yet has remained a controversial and divisive figure due to his unwavering commitment to modernism. Both Seifert and his buildings have been attacked, with his work described as "notorious" for its brutalist aesthetic and an arguable lack of contextual sensitivity. In recent years there has been a noticeable upsurge of interest in brutalist architecture and the beginnings of a re-evaluation of Seifert's extraordinary contribution to mid-century modern architecture and design; a number of buildings by Seifert and his associates have been granted recognition of their architectural importance. Beautifully illustrated, this book records, analyzes, and celebrates a considered selection of Seifert's buildings, with the most extensive survey of his work to date. Sara Kristoffersson's compelling study provides the first substantial critical history of IKEA. Kristoffersson argues that the company's commercial success is founded on a neat alignment of the brand with a particular image of Swedish national identity, one that is bound up with ideas of social democracy and egalitarianism - and its material expression in a pared-down, functional design aesthetic. Employing slogans such as "Design for everyone" and "Democratic design", IKEA signals a rejection of the stuffy, the 'chintzy', and the traditional in both design practices and social structures. Drawing on original research from the IKEA company archive and interviews with IKEA personnel, Design by IKEA traces IKEA's symbolic connection to Sweden, through its design output and its promotional materials, and examine how the company both promoted and profited from the concept of Scandinavian Design. Contributing to current debates about the globality and mediatization of memory, Media and Memory in New Shanghai interrogates the city's spectacular regeneration in an emergent world centre, describing how Western elites partake in the production of New Shanghai by feeling its futures and performing its futures past. "For fifty years, graffiti and street art have been challenging conventions and stimulating debate around our perceptions of what constitutes art. As the genre enters its sixth decade, this ground-breaking book offers a new interpretation of where these alternative artforms are situated today. Introducing the concept of 'Intermural Art' - art in-between the walls - Rafael Schacter presents a genre at a moment of transition. While many street and graffiti artists are still challenging the boundaries of the public sphere, an increasingly prevalent group are reshaping the field by their street art practice. No longer furtively entering the institution, no longer slavishly reproducing existing works inside, these artists have begun to create a form that articulates graffiti, street art, and contemporary-art influences, a form beholden on high art techniques and practices while simultaneously embracing its non-institutional roots. Through forty profiles of the leading proponents of this new approach from around the globe, Rafael Schacter presents a critical analysis for 'Intermural Art' while also showcasing some of the boldest work being made in contemporary art today."--Page 4 de la couverture. This second book in the Deer and Hunting Classics series rekindles the deer hunting history and the role of deer camps in hunting's culture. Relive the hunts, joy, and trepidation of famous American deer hunters as William Faulkner, Aldo Leopold, and Oliver Hazard Perry. Rare historical paintings and photographs capture the spirit of long-past deer camps. This collective biography represents the best of a great American tradition through deer camp experiences, such as freedom, camaraderie, rites of initiation, story-telling and venison cuisine. More than 12 million American deer hunters celebrate this annual tradition. Includes summaries of proceedings and addresses of annual meetings of various gas associations. L.C. set includes an index to proceedings, 1884-1902, issued as a supplement to Progressive age, Feb. 15, 1910. Dan Hewson's The Killing 1 is the novelization of the first series of the hit Danish crime drama Killing. 'Through the dark wood where the dead trees give no shelter Nanna Birk Larsen . . . There is a bright monocular eye that follows, like a hunter after a wounded deer. It moves in a slow approaching zigzag, marching through the Pineseskoven wasteland, through the Forest. The chill water, the fear, his presence not so far away . . . There is one torchlight now, the single blazing eye. And it is here . . .' Sarah Lund is looking forward to her last year as a detective with the Copenhagen police department before moving to Sweden. But everything changes when nineteen-year-old student, Nanna Birk Larsen, is found raped and brutally murdered in the woods outside the city. Lund's plans to relocate are put on hold as she leads the investigation along with fellow detective Jan Meyer. While Nanna's family struggles to cope with their loss, local politician, Troels Hartmann, is in the middle of an election campaign to become the new mayor of Copenhagen. When links between City Hall and the murder case come to light, the case takes an entirely different turn. Over the course of twenty days, a suspect emerges as violence and political intrigue cast their shadows over the hunt for the killer. CMJ New Music Report is the primary source for exclusive charts of non-commercial college radio airplay and independent and trend-forward retail sales. CMJ's trade publication compiles playlists for college and non-commercial stations; often a prelude to larger success. We agonise and argue when choosing it; we admire, compliment and criticise it (or keep it quiet about it); and the rest of the time we don't even notice it. Wallpaper has been taken to our homes for hundreds of years. It can make a house feel cosy or trendy, modern or traditional, and it is one of the key elements of home décor through which to express personal taste. Despite the threat from plain-painted minimalism, wallpaper maintains a strong presence in modern domestic decoration. Zoë Hendon traces the history of wallpaper in Britain and its foremost designers, examining how social mobility and new technologies have influenced design trends. From early Chinoiserie, through William Morris and on to the 'feature wall', this book looks at wallpaper's surprisingly controversial place in shaping our sense of home. There is one thing that has always kept lonely Derek O'Reilly dreaming of better days: His neighbor, the blue-eyed bad boy Nicolai Lund. Nick is everything Derek needs and fears . . . As years go by, life unfolds, Derek and Nick will collide and divide many times, but nothing can tear them apart. The Red and Blue Chronicles box set contains five novels that combine to tell the story of an enduring love. Contains the stories: Split: Weeks before Derek O'Reilly's engagement party, Nathan, a chance meeting with his first love, bad boy Nick Lund, catapults Derek into the past. But Nick isn't that young rebel anymore. He's a man hardened by invisible scars, struggling with grief. As Derek reads through his childhood diary, he realizes what Nick was to him, still today, and yet might be ... Blue Awakenings: After a decade of bar tending in resorts, Nick checks on his best friend David in Vancouver, only to learn David is convinced that a quiet existence in the burbs is the solution to all of their problems. Or will it be the biggest change of their lives? A Purple Winter: A near-fatal motorcycle brings Derek O'Reilly's life to a grinding halt and as he sinks into a coma, his mind travels back to that long ago winter when he met his husband Nicolai Lund, the bad boy next door with the arctic blue eyes ... But Derek must choose between remaining lost in his imagination or coming back to Nick, to love him here and now where forever truly exists. Persimmon Kiss: A year has passed since Derek's accident, and he still battles with brain injury symptoms. When Nick is called abroad on business, their friend Myles agrees to step in and help. The two men want what's best, but soon, they discover that they're not rivals, and what's there between them is echoing Derek's heart. Can they let go of their fear and allow this new love to unfold? Charters: A rich and varied history of wallpaper, from its modest beginnings in the 16th century, through the lavish designs of the 18th century to the computer generated patterns of the late 20th century. This book is an insight into a subject rarely covered in books on interior design. Longlist for The Center for Fiction 2022 First Novel Prize A "poignantly rendered and illuminating" (Washington Post) coming-of-age story about "the ways in which family, grief, love, queerness, and vulnerability all intersect" (Kristen Arnett, New York Times bestselling author). Perfect for fans of The Perks of Being a Wallflower and The Thirty Names of Night. Though Owen has never met anyone else who has a chatty bird in their chest, medical forums would tell you it's a terror. From the moment Gail emerged between Owen's ribs, his mother knew that she had to hide him away from the world. After a decade spent in isolation, Owen takes a brazen leap outdoors and his life is upended forever. Suddenly, he is forced to flee the home that he had felt so confining and hide in plain sight with his uncle and cousin in Washington. There he finds the joy of finding a family among friends; of sharing the bird in his chest and being embraced fully; of falling in love and feeling the devastating heartbreak of rejection before finding a new sense of happiness in the most unexpected place; of living his truth regardless of how hard it may be; of joy may try to tear him down. But the threat of the Army of Acronyms is a constant presence, making Owen wonder if he'll ever find a way out of the cycle of fear. "An honest celebration of life and everything we need right now in a book" (Andrew Sean Greer, Pulitzer Prize-winning author), The Boy with a Bird in His Chest grapples with the fear, depression, and feelings of isolation that come with believing that we will never be loved for who we are and learning to live fully and openly regardless.
