(Orchestra). In the Archivio della Sinfonia Milanese series this full consideration of symphonies by Antonio Brioschi (fl c. 1725-1750) includes historical and critical notes. The engravings are based on manuscript sources. Critical edition of the complete works of Pietro Antonio Locatelli, collected, evaluated and presented in 10 volumes. An unconventional American woman in post WW II NYC, Geneva and Algiers uses ingenuity, husband and lovers to make a meaningful life for herself. This study focused on the relationship between parent-infant/toddler interactions and early literacy skills for families living in low-income households. Twenty-seven families participated in this longitudinal study. Videotapes of parent-infant/toddler interactions participating in "simulated" daily experiences were made when the child was 14-, 24-, and 36-months-old. These tapes were coded on a scale rating child language, parent language, emotional tone, joint attention, parental guidance, and parental responsivity, all behaviors that have been related previously to later skill development in children. These parent-infant/toddler scores were then compared with early literacy skills, measured the spring prior to kindergarten entry. Parent-infant/toddler interactions related strongly to early literacy skills of receptive vocabulary, symbolic representation, and phonemic analysis, but not to rhyming or alliteration skills. In addition, the parent-infant/toddler interactions better predicted early literacy skills than did a parent-report regarding home literacy experiences. Implications for families, early childhood educators and programs, as well as researchers, are presented. Teachers of English language learners (ELLs) are often ill prepared to provide content area instruction tailored to their students' needs. This explanatory mixed method study examined the relationship between 15 ell teachers' multicultural attitudes and use of sheltered instruction (si). The purpose of the study was to ascertain whether teachers' multicultural attitudes influenced their use of si. Data were gathered using a Demographic Questionnaire, Multicultural Efficacy Scale (mes), Classroom Instruction Questionnaire, and semi-structured interviews. A correlational analysis found no statistically significant relationship (I.E., $r = -0.34$; $p = 0.22$) between participants' scores on si observations and the mes. A correlational estimate for the four highest si scorers indicated a relationship between the two sets of scores (I.E., $r = 0.75$; $p = 0.25$). Qualitative data did not indicate any patterns that might distinguish the high and low siop scorers; however, Aptitude Measurement Interaction may explain the different correlational results. novel, both in form and in content. The author uses modified conventions of Greek tragedy to counterpoint the ordinary lives of street-wise lesbians - lives for which a 'tragic fall' is a daily occurrence."--Back cover "Wearing the Phantom Out is a collection of narrative and dramatic poems based on the multi-media history and lore of a gifted, but tyrannical phantom and the artists of every stripe whom the phantom possesses in one way or another."-- Twelve poems to cover all life. Speaking of the universe, life, friendship, love; but also of the afterlife, of broken lives from drugs and violence. Poems as essential treatments of the different aspects of life that, at bottom, is common to all humans. Proposals in English and Italian in the original. Dodici poesie per coprire tutta la vita. Parlando di universo, esistenza, amicizia, amore; ma anche dell'aldilà, di vite spezzate dalla droga e dalla violenza. Poesie come essenziali trattazioni dei diversi aspetti dell'esistenza che, al fondo, accomuna tutti gli umani. Study Score Critical edition of the complete works of Pietro Antonio Locatelli, collected, evaluated and presented in 10 volumes. Avian reproductive success is dependent on many factors, including clutch size, predation and brood parasitism rates and the availability of food and suitable nest sites. Weight of young at the time they leave their nest affects long-term survival and ultimately affects reproduction success of the parents. Mathematical models provide powerful tools to quantify and better understand avian nesting biology. I used growth rate model, based on the Richards' growth rate equation, to compare Wood Thrush (Hylocichla mustelina) nesting growth at two sites in western New York to test my hypothesis that brood size, habitat type and time of year affect the growth of nestling Wood Thrushes. Significantly more Wood Thrushes were successful (fledged at least one young) in 1996 than in 1995 and success differed between sites. Probability of fledgling tended to be higher in nests with high cover scores than those nests with low scores. Brood size seemed to affect nestling growth, possible relating to feeding rates or quality of food. The probability of fledgling was significantly associated with the basal area (m²) of red maple. It is possible that wood thrush success is related to forest successional stage. -- Author abstract.
