The photographs in this book, taken by award winning photographer Nick Jenkins, set out to capture the many moods of the Cardigan Bay coastline, sometimes busy with holidaymakers, sometimes remote and aloof. There are times when we hear a story that is so compelling it makes us question our beliefs. This is one such tale, told to me by a sailor of high local repute, and integrity of character. It was recounted with such conviction that it etched itself into my brain, and I was compelled to write it down so it would not be lost to the waves forever. This is the story of Patrick Lennon, passed on by him as best he can remember given the ravages of time and obsession on his mind. Born in the 19th Century, he made his living forging across the perilous Irish Sea between Cork and Cardigan Bay, These times spawned many a tale of mermaids some were devils, and some were saviours. In Patrick Lennon's case he fell in love, and that was his downfall. The only guide to this splendid 60-mile coastal route, easily divided into shorter day walks. Beautifully illustrated. -- Welsh Books Council 1942. In a hospital south of London, Major Charles Davenport recovers from wounds received at Tobruk. In Whitehall, a top secret operation is underway. Britain's War Office is hard at work on a plan for the future invasion of the Continent - a plan destined to include Davenport. Across the Irish Sea, a young American widow seeks refuge on Ireland's eastern shore. Mary Katryn Kennedy has suffered her own wounds - the recent death of her husband and young child. Ireland remains steadfastly neutral in the War, but the island is a battleground nevertheless, home to desperate IRA plotters and German provocateurs. Two separate lives, swept up in a year of crisis, and brought together in Cardigan Bay. Blank 150 page lined journal *for your thoughts, ideas, and inspiration. The inside story of Cardigan Bay's dramatic rise to fame and fortune. A sweeping tale of two separate lives brought together in a time of historical crisis. When Major Charles Davenport is evacuated to England to recuperate from a battle wound received at Tobruk, a letter is awaiting him from his wife in London, informing him that she's in love with another man and wants a divorce. Mary Kennedy is a young Irish-American who has moved to her grandparents' cottage in Ireland to mourn the loss of her husband and infant daughter. Participating in a Red Cross morale-building effort, she corresponds with a young British soldier, but his letters cease abruptly following the fall of Tobruk. Determined to learn what has become of him she makes her way to the army hospital in Sussex where his commanding officer, Major Davenport, kindly explains the young soldier's fate. Thus begins a love story, carried out almost entirely by letter, crystallized by distance and heightened by the intimacy of the private written word set against the dramatic events of WWII and culminating in the landings on D-Day at Sword Beach.
