The objective of this book is to advance the scientific knowledge and understanding of numerous important aspects of zoology. It contains chapters discussing researches which have been carried out by scientists and zoologists, on various organisms, from various habitats and ecological systems. Some of the topics discussed in this book focus on the impact of human development on other organisms with respect to environmental changes. About the Book: The dimensions of Zoology are fast increasing with modern concepts on animal biodiversity, biochemistry, modern taxonomy and electron microscopy leading to higher concepts of nanotechnology. The importance of basic zoology even then cannot be ignored as most teachers and researchers rightly felt the need for a strong base in general zoology as a pre-requisite for all aspects of modern specialization. The present book A Text Book of Advance Zoology definitely serves a great deal towards the fulfillment of this aim. It is therefore, found extremely necessary to bring out the present volume of the text book in a more useful and enlarged form to serve the basic purpose of the graduate students of all Indian Universities. This volume has been thoroughly revised and enlarged to fulfill the advanced students' requirements. The authors are thankful to the College and Universities teachers for their encouragement the enlargement of this volume. John Fleming (1785-1857) was a minister of the Church of Scotland, but in his time at the University of Edinburgh he had also studied geology and zoology. In the tradition of the country parson who was also a talented and knowledgeable naturalist, he published his first works on the geology of the Shetland Islands while serving there as a minister. His subsequent works led to his being offered the chair of natural philosophy at the University of Aberdeen, and subsequently at the newly created chair of natural history at the Free Church College in Edinburgh. The two-volume Philosophy of Zoology was published in 1822, and the young Charles Darwin is recorded as borrowing it from the library of Edinburgh University in 1825/6. His intention in the book was to 'collect the truths of Zoology within a small compass, and to render them more intelligible by a systematical arrangement'.
