Marathi, an Indo-Aryan language, is the official language of Maharashtra, including Mumbai. Father Thomas Stephens, the first English traveler to Goa, a pioneer linguist, wrote "Christa Puran" in Marathi (1616) and "Arte da Lingoa Canarim" in Portuguese, printed in (1640). The latter is a grammar of Konkani, a language closely related to Marathi. It is the first grammar of its kind marking a new grammatical tradition for modern

Indo-Aryan languages. The present volume contains an extensive account of Marathi phonology, morphology, word formation and syntax. It succinctly describes the accentual system, special compound verb forms, unique pronominal anaphors, complex agreement due to split ergative system, and special pronominal marking. The book also contains a case study of a child's acquisition of Marathi and an essay on Women's Language, the two topics that are increasingly becoming relevant to the grammar." It is the dominant language of Bombay, the world's second most populous city, and the surrounding areas. This concise coursebook, specially designed for self-study, is the perfect introduction. The lessons emphasise learning the spoken language. Special attention is given to proper pronunciation and grammar is explained with an eye towards the practical. The book offers a firm grounding in the language to both students and travellers. Excerpt from The Student's Manual of Marathi Grammar: Designed for High Schools The following pages were first written by me for the benefit of my own pupils, who were preparing for Matriculation, as they could not find all the needful information in the existing treatises on Marathi Grammar. Believing that they might prove useful to other students, I have ventured to publish them; and should scholars, who may chance to see them, suggest any improvements, I shall feel grateful. I have paid special attention to simplicity and perspicuity in the composition of this book, and have on this account abstained from all allusion to Sanskrit and other languages, except in the chapters on derivation. I have treated of the several departments of Grammar separately, which may have the effect of setting this intricate subject in a clear and interesting form before the student. I have earnestly sought to unfold and evolve the laws and principles of the Marathi language, rather than engraft those of other languages on it, but how far I have succeeded in my attempts I leave it to the public to judge. The classification of the laws of the changes of vowels and consonants, which take place in inflection and composition; the division of the verbs into conjugations; the systematic arrangement of the compounds under three classes, and the observations on the obscure and apparent compounds, the formation of the vocables, &c. &c., are quite new and original. The chapter on the origin of the inflections cannot fail to interest the student. It is, indeed, a most important discovery which philologists have made, that the inflections, which were looked upon but a few years back as meaningless particles, are words or fragments of words; it has thrown a flood of interesting light upon the whole subject of Grammar.
