Making the Grade Nov 30 2020 The current relationship between school districts, state boards of education, and the federal government raises important questions about how and why teaching and learning have changed over the course of the past century. As the federal government has taken on a more active role in education, the American public school system has evolved into something that drastically differs from what it once was. The purpose of this study was to explore changes in education throughout the twentieth century, and how those changes have worked to influence today's classrooms. First, this work assesses increased federal actions that have occurred since 1900. Then, it explores changes in curricula and textbooks throughout the century and evaluates their effects on high school social studies students. This thesis will demonstrate that increased federal attention, combined with more complex textbooks and curricula, has ultimately been detrimental to the teaching and learning of social studies.
